Our vision

Become a premier global investment manager that works in partnership with clients to create outcome-focused solutions to help them secure their financial future.

At Nuveen we believe

Successful long-term investment outcomes for our clients must drive our business decisions.

Diversity of thought, people and investment products is critical to our clients' investment success — and to our own.

Investing alongside our clients helps us stay aligned with their interests.

Responsible investing principles provide enduring benefits for our clients and our communities.

Persistent innovation powers success — for our clients and for us.

In the same way that design guidelines give a face to our brand, standards for written and verbal communications give us a voice. With so many employees representing Nuveen, we promote a familiar and cohesive brand when we use a consistent tone across our firm.

IN EVERY COMMUNICATION...

Be authentic, direct, to the point, purposeful.

Use clear, easy to understand, plain spoken language without jargon.

Reflect our personality:

Approachable | Diverse thinking | Respectful of clients
Optimistic | Can-do-attitude

NOTE: If you’re constructing a high-level corporate message, remember to use language that will resonate with all types of investors: retail and institutional, advisors/consultants and individuals.

For help crafting messages, contact brand@nuveen.com.

Logo usage

The full logo should always be used on covers and prominent pieces. It is used in limited sizes across all material. For example, all stationery pieces, use the same sized logotype.

In some cases, like presentation footers (example on page 15) and certain promotional pieces, the logo will be placed without the TIAA reference.

The lower case “n” is used exclusively in our logo and as a design element. In copy, always use an upper case “N.” We are Nuveen.

Clear space around the logo should equal 2 times the height of the n.

Color

We have created three tiers of colors for the system. The system builds by using one base color, up to two secondary colors and a tertiary color to highlight content.

Always start with one base color. Use up to two secondary colors with a base color. These are for rules, background tints and typography.

If and when more colors are needed, consult the additional palette. These may be needed, for instance, in charts or complex infographics.

The brand’s charting system utilizes all of the colors in the palette, but in a preferred order. Please email brand@nuveen.com for details.

Investing in the agriculture value chain

Agricultural opportunities exist in key developed markets

Although demand growth is relatively low in developed nations, these countries are net exporters that enjoy large primary production footprints and advanced infrastructure and processing capabilities. They will play a key part in supplying the food needs of developing countries. The relevant privately owned agriculture value chain universe in the United States, Canada, Australia and New Zealand generates over $700 billion in annual revenue.

Nuveen and AGR Partners have prior agriculture value-add investing experience in these key developed markets, and believe they represent an attractive opportunity to realize strong risk-adjusted investment returns.

Businesses in the agriculture value chain have attractive qualities

- Substantial tangible asset base
- Volume-driven revenues with limited exposure to commodity price fluctuations
- Solid, business-to-business relationships with end customers, with limited reliance on consumer brand recognition
- Ability to generate attractive levels of free cash flow which provides investors with current income via dividends and/or interest payments

Three reasons to invest in high yield municipal bonds

Higher taxes coupled with a low yield environment makes after-tax return a key consideration. An allocation to high yield municipal bonds may help:

Address the risks of rising rates

15-year average total return during rising rate months

Price declines can potentially be offset with high yield municipal bonds, which have historically responded favorably to rising rates

Provide additional total return if spreads narrow

(01 Oct 1995 – 31 Dec 2017)

Wide credit spreads may provide attractive income and the potential for strong total returns if yield spreads narrow

Dampen volatility through lower historical correlation

15-year correlation for high yield municipals vs. other asset classes

Low correlation to traditional bond and equity investments may offer the potential to reduce overall portfolio risk

TEN PREDICTIONS FOR 2018

From nearly perfect to less perfect

WHAT'S INSIDE

2017

The year in review: In many ways, 2017 was a “perfect” year for financial markets. Page 3

Scorecard: Our scorecard shows our predictions were more correct than incorrect last year. Pages 4-5

By the numbers: Nearly every asset class saw price appreciation, with global equities handily surpassing bonds. Page 6

NOT FDIC-INSURED | MAY LOSE VALUE | NO BANK GUARANTEE

The coming year isn't likely to be as perfect as last year. But investors can find opportunities — if they know where to look.

As I begin thinking about my predictions for the coming year, I ask myself a series of questions about the current year: What went right and wrong? What were the bright spots and the downsides? What were the unexpected opportunities and risks? Usually, the answers are a mixed bag, but 2017 stands apart: Over the several decades during which I've made predictions, 2017 may well be the closest-to-perfect year ever for equities.

Consider this: Economic growth accelerated modestly and unemployment fell to nearly a 20-year low.¹ Inflation remained low. Monetary policy stayed accommodative. Corporate earnings soared higher. Geopolitical risks remained well contained and didn't negatively affect financial markets. And for the first time in history, the S&P 500 Index rose every month as volatility dropped sharply.²

This made for a pretty easy and rewarding year for investors. But I think conditions will start getting tougher over the course of 2018. This isn't to say that there are immediate areas of concern, but I think this year will be a bit less perfect than last year.

A SHIFT FROM NEARLY PERFECT TO LESS PERFECT
2017	2018
A good economy accelerating from 2016	A good economy decelerating into 2019
Low and steady inflation and yields	Low but rising inflation and yields
Corporate earnings surpassing past expectations	Corporate earnings meeting expectations
Investors awaiting the effects of tax cuts	Investors realizing the effects of tax cuts
Strong stock markets moving straight up	Decent stock markets moving up bumpy

I'm not expecting a radical shift, but a shift nonetheless. And this may mean investors must work a little harder than in the past to find opportunities. In the following pages, I offer my predictions for the coming year and discuss important themes that may emerge. But for now, I wish all of you a Happy New Year as you seek perfection in all of your endeavors.

Best Regards,

Robert C. Doll, CFA

2 | Ten predictions for 2018

2017 recap

A year of positive surprises

NEARLY EVERYTHING SEEMED TO GO RIGHT IN 2017, STARTING WITH THE GLOBAL ECONOMY. The U.S. economy remained in a slow expansion, but it did expand. The global economy also showed signs of improvement and growth became more synchronous, with Europe in particular showing strength. And while growth improved, inflation remained surprisingly tame, with wage growth rising slightly to a 2.5% annual rate.¹ The combination of slow growth and low inflation allowed global central banks to keep monetary policy accommodative, even as the Federal Reserve and other policymakers slowly tightened.

WE EXPECTED ANOTHER YEAR OF POSITIVE EQUITY RETURNS, BUT WE WERE SURPRISED BY THE DEGREE TO WHICH IT HAPPENED. The equity-friendly environment caused stock prices, as measured by the total return of the S&P 500 Index, to rise for the ninth consecutive year and increase every month in 2017.² We were also surprised by how low volatility dropped during the year as investors enjoyed slow and steady gains. Non-U.S. equities provided strong returns, and in many cases outpaced the United States, especially in emerging markets. Other risk assets, such as fixed income credit sectors, experienced solid returns as well.

THE BIGGEST STOCK MARKET STORY IN 2017 WAS THE STRING OF SEEMINGLY NEVER-ENDING POSITIVE EARNINGS SURPRISES, FOLLOWED BY CONSTANT UPWARD EARNINGS REVISIONS. Memories of deflation and the Great Recession seemed to keep sentiment cautious and skeptical (if not outright bearish), as investors constantly underestimated earnings results. Despite the skepticism, however, S&P 500 earnings per share grew by more than 15% in each of the first three quarters of 2017, with the fourth quarter also poised to deliver solid results.³

SO HOW LONG WILL THE PARTY LAST? U.S. equity valuation levels are being questioned, and while they are high relative to history, we think they remain reasonable versus other asset classes. Bull markets don't die of old age or over-valuation. Something negative, usually unwanted inflation, becomes the catalyst for a downturn. And serious negative factors seem absent in the 2018 outlook.

2017 Highlights

- ▲ The U.S. and global economies expanded steadily while inflation remained low.
- ▲ Corporate earnings surged higher, helping stock markets extend the bull market.
- ▲ Volatility fell to extreme lows, providing a smooth ride for investors.

2017 Lowlights

- ▼ It's honestly tough to think of market-related negatives, but there were a couple around the margins.
- ▼ The global political environment didn't hurt markets, but rising protectionism and anti-trade sentiment increased and bear watching.
- ▼ Equity valuations increased over the course of 2017, and pockets of the market may be stretched.

Weekly Fixed Income
Commentary

22 January 2018

Treasury yields continue rising across the curve

U.S. Treasury yields rose again last week for all maturities, led by the 10-year yield. This resulted in negative total returns for all domestic sectors. High yield represented a relative bright spot, outperforming in both the corporate and municipal markets. The market shows a 90% expectation for three Federal Reserve (Fed) rate hikes in 2018, but still-accommodative policy should support financial conditions and credit sectors for the balance of the year.

HIGHLIGHTS

- All domestic non-Treasury sectors produced negative total returns, resulting from rising Treasury yields.
- High yield municipals outperformed, helped by contracting municipal-to-Treasury ratios and credit spreads.
- High yield corporate bonds led other credit sectors, even though they experienced a slightly negative total return.

Responsible
Two year update

Derek Dorn
Managing Director
Regulatory Engagement
TIAA

The U.S. Department of Labor replaced 2008 guidance to of Labor Secretary Tom Perle "cooties" to including responsible (RI) in retirement plans. The new framework enables retirement sponsors to more readily adopt Defined Contribution (DC) plans. Employers can more readily respond to rapidly rising demand for responsible approaches, especially among Millennial participants.

HOW IT ALL BEGAN

DOL has consistently stated that it does not allow fiduciaries to sacrifice performance for the sake of achieving responsible investing goals. But it's confirmed that a fiduciary can continue to provide a return comparable to other investments having similar characteristics. This standard is of the "everything-being-equal" test.
